The northern biker foodies are all revved up and raring to go – their new BBC series Hairy Bikers' Best of British 2, offers another dollop of tasty British nosh, and starts Thursday 4 April. Dave Myers explains more about discovering new eats by riding his oily bike from town to town...

You bike up and down the country to discover great eats, what's your favourite location in the UK?

We had some wonderful times on the Isle of Wight, actually. We went to the garlic farm there..... I also spent a wonderful morning fishing there. It was one of those sunny days that when the programme comes out next week will make everybody nostalgic. Then we went to a local fish restaurant and it was old-fashioned, super fresh fish with a very well-made parsley sauce. It was one of the nicest things we had. It was simple, but right. We're really proud of the fact that we do think British food is some of the best in the world. It's world-class and if you go back in time, you can find the unique character it has.
